

ASBYU overhaul to be submitted

By CAMILLE GOODRICH
Universe Staff Writer

ASBYU's proposal to restructure student government will be submitted to the administration Thursday, but details of the proposal will not be disclosed until the administration has reviewed it.

The final editing was due Monday. By Thursday, the restructuring proposal will be finished and submitted to Maren M. Mouritsen, the Dean of Student Life," said ASBYU Public Relations Director Corey Freebairn. After the Dean of Student Life reads it, the proposal will go to Executive Vice-President John Stohltz and the President's Council and finally to President Holland, he said.

There is no way of determining how long it will be for the administration to read and consider the proposal or if any changes will take place, said Freebairn.

The proposal is the culmination of 3 1/2 years of research and restructuring attempts to change the structure and organization of ASBYU.

"It is evident that the present structure is not serving the students," said ASBYU President Jon Coleman.

At this time ASBYU is 98 percent programming and the rest is communicating the needs of the students to the administration. "ASBYU has a lot of potential to do that," he said.

The restructuring committee consists of people who have worked on past restructuring committees, a few students, coordinators from student programs and some ASBYU executive council members, said Freebairn.

The contents of the proposal have not been released and very few people outside of the restructuring committee know the details of what ASBYU is proposing to the administration.

"We are going to present the proposal to the administration before presenting it to the students," said Coleman. "At this point there are many possible options and alternatives."

When it comes back from the President's Council for revisions and alterations, it will be made available for students to see. At that time they will be able to give their input, he said. Coleman stressed that students have been contributing their restructuring ideas for years.

Other reasons for not wanting to release details of the proposal are the mistakes of the past. "In the past, proper processes and channels have not been used. We are trying to be careful and use correct procedures. That is why we have accomplished as much as we have," said ASBYU Attorney General Susan White.

"It has taken over three years to get to the point where the administration is excited and to where all the bases have been covered," said Freebairn. "A lot have mistakes have been made in the past because of bad publicity and bad public relations. It is really important that students don't get false expectations."

Many students and potential candidates are wondering how the proposal will affect elections this year. According to Coleman, there will be elections but the question is when. "We expect some initial feedback soon for the best way to proceed with elections. I am very sensitive to the position of potential candidates," he said.

"I was in the same position last year. I understood that there might be some changes but I decided to run anyway," he said.

Terrorists put executions on hold 'Until further notice'

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Moslem kidnappers said at their Monday midnight deadline for killing three American hostages and an Indian that they had extended it "until further notice."

A handwritten statement in Arabic signed by Islamic Jihad for the Liberation of Palestine described the decision as a response to pleas from the hostages, their families, Lebanese organizations and the Indian government.

But the statement also said the group would retaliate for the "insult" by U.S. Secretary of State George P. Shultz, who said the people of kidnapping-beset Beirut "have a plague." It did not indicate what form the action might take, or whether it could involve the hostages.

The statement was delivered to the Beirut office of a Western news

Hostage Alann Steen had said in an earlier message Monday that the hostages would die unless Israel freed 400 Arab prisoners. He said the captors would not reconsider the death verdict or extend the deadline.

"We will be executed at midnight" Steen, 47, of Boston, said in the letter to his wife. It was accompanied by notes to their wives from the two other kidnapped American college teachers.

"Until then if you do love us and your hearts beat for us, put pressure on Israel to show good will. Let Israel promise the organization (of the kidnappers) to show good will," Steen wrote.

"Let Israel promise the organization plainly and officially that 400 Palestinian mujaheds (holy warriors) will be free. Otherwise, we won't be alive after midnight."

Steen is a communications instructor; Polhill, 53, of New York City, lectures on accounting; Turner, 39, of Boise, Idaho, is a visiting professor of mathematics and computer science; and Indian-born Singh, 60, a legal resident alien of the United States, is a visiting professor of finance.

The three-page letter, accompanied by a Polaroid photograph of Steen, was delivered at mid-afternoon to the Beirut office of a Western news agency with a photograph of Steen, 81 1/2 hours before the death deadline.

Steen's letter urged the hostages' wives, the American people and the media to "push our government to order Israel to guarantee the release of 400 Palestinian mujaheds before midnight."

The letter presumed that Israel must act if Washington dictates. It contained misspellings and awkward grammar and turns of phrase that could mean it was drafted by Steen's captors. The word for holy warrior came variously as mujahed and mujahid.

Shimon Peres, Israeli Foreign Minister said Monday in Jerusalem that Israel had not received a request from the United States to free the prisoners.

Unlocked doors cause of theft increase

By YVONNE BLACKBURN
Universe Staff Writer

It is late at night and you are the only one home. You go to bed leaving the door unlocked knowing your roommates will soon be home. About an hour later you are awakened by what you think is a noisy roommate but do not think anything of it. The next morning you realize you were robbed.

In the past few weeks apartment burglaries have escalated, according to Provo City Police.

Thefts have risen 34 percent in the past year, and 50 percent of these have been because of unlocked doors, said a Provo City Police spokesman.

According to a letter the Provo City Police Department sent out to the BYU stakes of The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints, people are not security conscious in Provo. They do not want to believe crime happens in the community.

One student lives in a house with no lock on the front door. His roommate had his wallet stolen off the kitchen table one night. He was fortunate because the wallet was found at a truck stop in Springville.

According to the student, the landlord lives in this house too, but does nothing about placing a lock on the front door.

The police have suggested placing a deadbolt on all external doors. Yet not everyone uses their existing locks.

Marcus Flansburg, a freshman with an undeclared major from Morgan Hill, Calif., had his microwave stolen. He figures the burglary took place about 5 a.m. since his roommate woke up because the kitchen light was on. "He assumed it was someone getting a snack or something after the light went out," Flansburg said.

"The burglar didn't touch a $1,000 keyboard, speakers, television or stereo. He seemed to know he wanted the microwave," he said.

Flansburg said they lock their door at night but not during the day. "It's hard to keep the door locked during the day when you are in and out. Besides, when you hear someone come in the door you don't want to get up to see who it is. I don't want to look like their father."

Jeff and Todd Nielson, brothers from Cardston, Alberta, had their stereo and acoustic guitar stolen. "The ghetto blaster was sitting on the kitchen table and the guitar was by the front door," Jeff Nielson said. "It was like the guy came in and grabbed the stuff closest to the door and left."

Nielson said the burglary was not surprising to him in this community but the unlocked front door was. "It's kind of dumb because our door is usually locked. Our roommate who normally locks the front door went to Las Vegas and didn't tell anyone. It's kind of a freak happening."

Other problems, besides burglaries, result from an opened front door. Kate Watkins, a senior in nursing from Lombard, Ill., had a guy walk into her apartment.

"I was the first one home on a Friday night and it was about 11:45 p.m. I didn't lock the door because I figured that all my other roommates would be home soon," Watkins said.

"I went into my room and turned on a reading light to write letters. The lights in the living room and kitchen were all turned off."

She continued, "About 12:10 a.m. I heard the door open and footsteps come to about the middle of the living room floor. I yelled out, 'Who's there' but no one answered. I got up to see who it was as I heard the footsteps come to my bedroom door. As I looked up, there was a great big guy standing in the doorway."

"I couldn't say anything. The man said, 'Excuse me. I have the wrong apartment,' and he left. It was obvious he was a burglar. He was dressed in dark clothes, had black gloves on and was carrying a travel bag," Watkins said.

The police have told all people, not just those who have been robbed, to keep their front doors locked and windows secured. Other tips they have given is to make the apartment appear as if someone is home.

Leaving a light on or a radio playing low, as if someone is talking inside, scares off the burglar, a police detective said.

Residential Burglaries

The Provo City Police department blames 50% of last year's residential burglaries on unlocked doors.

Protect yourself

- Use a deadbolt lock on all external doors.
- Leave a light or radio on to make the apartment look as though someone is home.
- Don't open the door to strangers. Use a peephole and talk through the door.

Group wants investigation

Contra aid opposed

By FRANCIE L. BALL
Senior Reporter
and the Associated Press

The Nicaraguan Contra rebels engage in "selective but systematic killing" of perceived opponents and in the widespread kidnapping of civilians, including children, according to a report released Monday.

In most conventional wars, there is a "taboo against bumping off civilian leaders on either side, but in guerrilla insurgencies such as this, top political leaders end up being targets," said Eric Jones, BYU professor of political science. He emphasized that in a "political war" such as this, the targets are not usually the military forces, but the political leadership.

Americas Watch, a New York-based group that conducted the study, also said the Nicaraguan government must make greater efforts to investigate alleged abuses by the military and to try those responsible.

The 166-page report calls for a halt in U.S. funding for the Contras and accuses the Reagan administration of distorting the facts by portraying the Sandinista government in the most negative terms and the insurgents in the most favorable light.

"No attempt whatsoever is made to moderate such portrayals in the light of actual performance," the report said.

At a news conference, Americas Watch Vice Chairman Aryeh Neier said the group was unable to detect any improvement in the human rights performance of the Contras.

But Jones said the Reagan administration sees the Contras as preferable to the Communist-backed Sandinistas.

"U.S. policy is aimed at preventing the spread of communism in this hemisphere," he said. "In the modern world, allies in a particular situation are not always the kind of people that would get elected to positions in the United States itself, but if the Contras are doing something we find reprehensible, we can put pressure on them to stop."

The Sandinistas are backed by the communists in Cuba, said Jones, and are trying to follow in the footsteps of Castro in establishing a communist government. If they were to come to power, the United States would have no power to stop them on any issue.

The Reagan administration has accused Americas Watch of bias in its previous reports on human rights performance in Nicaragua and elsewhere.

"I don't think the administration will give much weight to the report," said Jones. "They (Americas Watch) had a certain political goal in mind" when conducting the study, and the Reagan administration "won't respond or see it as valid," he said.

The study is the 10th by the group on the subject of human rights in Nicaragua. It covers the period February-December 1986 and was based on a number of fact-finding trips to the country.

Drug-ring leader claims innocence

JACKSONVILLE, Fla. (AP) — A man accused of being one of the leaders of the world's largest drug-smuggling ring pleaded innocent and was ordered held without bond after a prosecutor called him "the personal embodiment of a narco-terrorist."

Carlos Lehder Rivas, 37, entered innocent pleas to 11 drug smuggling counts at a hearing before U.S. Magistrate Harvey S. Schlesinger, and said he had no funds to pay for an attorney.

"I have been hounded by the Colombian army for the last four years," said Lehder. "I've been in the jungle for the last four years disconnected from civilization."

He said all his assets had been frozen.

The Internal Revenue Service also has filed a $70 million lien on Lehder's estimated earnings of up to $300 million in the early 1980s, prosecutors said at the hearing.

Lehder is "the personal embodiment of a narco-terrorist," he added.

Lehder is accused of being one of the leaders of the Medellín Cartel that used bullets, bombs and bribes to build the world's largest cocaine-smuggling ring. He eluded capture for more than two years in Colombia after his extradition in 1984.

Civil rights group to picket TV show

CUMMING, Ga. (AP) — A civil rights coalition plans to picket Monday's broadcast of The Oprah Winfrey Show from Forsyth County, saying the television talk show will not accurately portray the area's racial problems.

The Rev. Hosea Williams, an Atlanta city councilman and spokesman for the Coalition Against Fear and Intimidation, said the program's producers are limiting participation in the show to residents of the all-white county, thus keeping out civil rights activists.

"We think it's a totally unbalanced show," Williams said. "It's lopsided."

Producers of the show hosted by Winfrey, who is black, said they do not want to rehearse the conflict between the civil rights faction and county officials, but rather to present a more personalized look at residents' feelings.

"If we wanted to do a confrontational show, we would have promoted it as such," she said. Instead, producers interviewed average people from Forsyth County and invited about 100 with varying opinions, she said.

Analysts predict stable interest rates

WASHINGTON (AP) — Interest rates, which fell dramatically last year, are likely to show much less movement in 1987 amid concern by the Federal Reserve Board over a weaker dollar and rising inflation, economists predicted Monday.

During 1986, a variety of interest rates, including home mortgage rates, fell to their lowest levels in nine years as the Fed pursued an aggressive policy of lowering rates in order to stimulate a sluggish U.S. economy.

Fed policy-makers convene again today for their first strategy session of the new year, a key meeting at which they will establish money growth targets for 1987.

While the results of the session will not be revealed until Fed Chairman Paul Volcker testifies before the Senate Banking Committee on Feb. 19, many private economists are looking for a more cautious Fed approach.

While these analysts don't believe the central bank will try to push interest rates higher, they don't expect an effort to pull rates lower either, mainly because of concern by Fed officials over the sharp drop in the value of the dollar.

House passes cigarette, gasoline taxes

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — The Utah House Monday passed the first major tax increase of the 1987 general session, voting to boost the tax on cigarettes by 11 cents per pack.

The increase would bring the total state tax to 23 cents per pack, and would raise nearly $11 million. The bill passed on a 46-26 vote and now goes to the Senate for further consideration.

Earlier in the day, a House committee voted to advance another bill that would boost the state tax on gasoline by 3 cents per gallon to 17 cents. That increase would raise $24 million in new revenue for highway repair and maintenance.

The cigarette tax bill originally called for an 8-cent-per-pack increase, but was amended in committee earlier in the session to 11 cents. Gov. Norm Bangerter also had sought an 8-cent increase. Each penny of additional tax per pack generates about $1 million in tax revenue.

The bill's sponsor, Rep. Irby Arrington, R-Salt Lake, said he will try to channel some of the money into anti-smoking programs and pre-natal care programs for young mothers. Arrington said those needs provided the original impetus for the bill.

Trooper suspended after firing shots

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — A Utah Highway Patrol trooper faced possible criminal charges Monday after firing 13 shots at his patrol car, driven off by a woman who claimed he had threatened to arrest her if she didn't have sex with him. Highway Patrol officials suspended Trooper Ernest B. Wilcock without pay and recommended that he be fired.

"His use of his service weapon under the circumstances that existed that morning is a gross misconduct on his part and one that we will not tolerate," said Highway Patrol Col. Dennis Nordfelt.

Amy Schaefer, 20, said she escaped in the trooper's car after shoving him out and locking the door.

Salt Lake County attorney's office and sheriff's department were investigating the incident to determine whether criminal charges should be filed.

Nordfelt would not comment on whether Wilcock, 31, made improper sexual advances toward Schaefer. He said the trooper indicated he would seek a hearing on his suspension. Thirteen shell casings were found at the site.

Book foresees danger: Soviet strike

WASHINGTON (AP) — The U.S. atomic weapons command system has become one of the largest, as well as one of the most important, targets for a possible Soviet strike, according to a book published Monday by Harvard and the Brookings Institution.

An attack on any of more than 1,500 key points in the system might be misinterpreted as an attack on the whole, triggering a devastating American response, said Ashton Carter, a Harvard professor who helped edit the book and contributed two chapters.

System attack could be misinterpreted

"The distinction between initiation and retaliation would probably become blurred," Carter told a news conference at Brookings, a liberal research institution in Washington.

The book, "Managing Nuclear Operations," finds good and bad in the intricate systems devised to manage superpower nuclear arsenals.

The good news, said contributor

Donald Cotter, is that in 40 years of handling nuclear arms, neither the Soviet Union nor the United States has accidentally launched an intercontinental ballistic missile or exploded a nuclear bomb by mistake.

Yet Cotter, a former assistant secretary of defense, expressed concern that "technology opportunities rather than an overriding strategy drove the acquisition" of nuclear forces and the systems to direct them.

The bad news, and the heart of the issue, the book says, is that although the weapons can be tested under ground without breaking treaties or endangering lives, the operating systems cannot be tried out in conditions resembling war.

More bad news is that the 750-page book, which was written by 22 government and academic experts who are supposed to understand nuclear issues, raises more questions than answers.

Filipino troops ready to combat rebels

MANILA, Philippines (AP) — Military chief Gen. Fidel V. Ramos said today his forces were ready for action if ordered by President Corason Aquino following the refusal of Communist rebels to extend a 60-day cease-fire.

"They (the rebels) have bared their fangs, so to speak, to a peace-loving people," Ramos told reporters after inspecting a training camp in Rizal province, east of Manila, a day after the cease-fire ended.

He said the military was gathering intelligence on rebel forces for possible new action, but would "follow the decisions of the civilian leadership."

The cease-fire, the first nationwide truce in the 18-year insurgency by the New People's Army, expired at noon Sunday. The Communist-dominated National Democratic Front, which represented the rebels in peace talks, called for "militant and unremitting struggles" to achieve its goals.

Military headquarters said there were no reports of clashes today but that troops were on alert.

As the peace initiative with the Communists collapsed, the government opened new talks today with the largest Moslem rebel group, the Moro National Liberation Front, in hopes of ending a long-running Islamic insurgency in Mindanao and other southern islands.

National Affairs Minister Aquilino Pimentel said the government was "sincerely prepared to listen to the grievances of our Moslem brethren" but would not sacrifice the interests of non-Moslems, who make up 60 percent of Mindanao's population.

The Moslem group agreed to submit a formal proposal for Mindanao autonomy Feb. 19.

Pimentel said the government wanted to include all Moslem factions in the talks, but MNLF delegate Habib Hashim said any other Moslem groups that joined would have to be under the direction of his group.

Chief government negotiator Teofisto Guingona on Sunday blamed Communist hardliners for the collapse of the cease-fire but said the administration would continue peace talks with regional rebel leaders.

Maj. Gen. Eduardo Ermita, deputy chief of staff, told reporters today "we're still open" to a negotiated peace, adding, "If they don't give us the signal, we'll just keep on with our peace-keeping operations."

Ramos, however, said the rebels had launched attacks in three areas in the final days of the cease-fire and the military was in "hot pursuit."

Meadow Gold Dairy will not prosecute students in possession of their milk crates if they are returned within the week, said Meadow Gold Round Manager Kim Dangerfield.

According to Chief of Police Robert Kelshaw, "Students in Heritage Halls are to take crates to the patio area of the HRNC; DT residents should take crates to the MORC service dock; all others may deposit crates on the service dock of the ASB."

Child-care need increases

WASHINGTON (AP) — Child-care programs, a crucial problem for working couples today, will likely become increasingly important to employers who want to keep experienced staffers on the job, a new study says.

"In the future, tight labor markets will make it harder to replace experienced female employees who leave work to start a family," says the report published Monday by the private Population Reference Bureau.

In the years since the end of World War II women have flooded into the labor market, and time away from their traditional household duties has faced millions of families with a dilemma of finding care for small children.

Responses to this change have varied from family to family and region to region, with some employers initiating programs to assist their workers. Those actions will become increasingly important, says the study by Martin O'Connell of the U.S. Census Bureau and David E. Bloom of Harvard University.

Some women can hire help, but most domestic workers do less than half the housework and "husbands are not much help either," with the majority of them doing less than one-fourth of the housework, the authors state.

Six arrested at test site

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (AP) — Six anti-nuclear activists were arrested on the Nevada Test Site after hiking to a desolate desert area attempting to halt a nuclear weapons test they say is scheduled for Thursday.

The six, members of the Rocky Mountain Peace Test, Boulder, Colo., were taken to Beatty, Nev., where they face charges of trespassing on government property.

The six entered the desert site Jan. 29 hoping to halt a test which was conducted Feb. 3. Failing to halt that test, the six then hiked toward an area where Peace Test officials say a weapons test is planned Thursday. The protesters were near ground zero when they were arrested, Peace Test spokesman Michael Terry said Monday.

The six were identified as: John Green, 25; Hank Brusselback, 43; Jose Morales, 23; Brendan Ruiz, 26 and Joy LaSalle, 22, all of Boulder, and David Weddingdress, 32, of Berkeley, Calif.

The arrests were the latest in a series of anti-nuclear incidents at the test site. Four hundred thirty-seven people were arrested during a protest Thursday.

McFarlane ill from Valium

WASHINGTON (AP) — Former national security adviser Robert C. McFarlane, who figured prominently in President Reagan's clandestine sale of weapons to Iran, was hospitalized Monday for a Valium overdose that a broadcast report said was a suicide attempt.

McFarlane, 49, was admitted to Bethesda Naval Medical Center about 8 a.m. EST. Hospital spokesman Lt. Rus Sanford said Mc-Farlane was in good condition.

Peter Morgan, one of McFarlane's lawyers, said the former White House official had taken an overdose of the drug, a tranquilizer.

CBS News, quoting unnamed, informed sources, reported that hospital officials believed the overdose resulted from a suicide attempt.

CBS also reported that McFarlane had been depressed and emotional recently.

AIDS killed Liberace, says coroner

INDIO, Calif. (AP) — Liberace died of a disease caused by AIDS, the Riverside County coroner said Monday, and he accused the entertainer's doctors of covering up the cause of death.

"Somebody along the line wanted to pull a fast one on us," Coroner Raymond Carrillo said.

Microscopic tissue analysis showed that Liberace died because of cytomegalovirus pneumonia, he said.

"In layman's terms, Mr. Liberace died of an opportunistic disease caused by acquired immune deficiency syndrome," he said.

BYU set gone; believed burned

Two-thirds of the set from BYU's production 'Together Again for the First Time' was assumed burned in October's Homecoming.

"Together" was performed last semester on the Pardoe stage. The set for the show needed to be stored, according to Lee Walker, technical director for the theater department. The department rented half of Storage Bay #3 on BYU Motion Picture Studio lot. The other half was being rented by KBYU-TV.

When BYU's moving crew took the set to the storage bay, half of the set was placed on KBYU-TV's side, explained a source. "That's when it happened, KBYU-TV cleaned house and they didn't recognize the stuff so they threw it out," the source said.

"They (KBYU-TV) did it in ignorance," said Walker.

"It was removed in good faith," said Don Parker, scene shop foreman. "They didn't know it was ours."

When the people in charge of the Homecoming bonfire went looking for firewood they went to the motion picture studios where there is usually a great deal of scrap wood, the source reported. The people at the studios didn't recognize the set, so they gave permission for it to be used during the October Homecoming bonfire, the source said.

The mix-up went unnoticed until January 19 when the set crew began to gather the set for rehearsals for competition. "It took three people several hours a day for five days before we finally tracked down what had happened," said the source. "They really gave us the runaround."

More than half the set was missing. "We had to rebuild almost two-thirds of the set," Parker said. "We had to redo the wooden cabinetry, a number of walls had to be rebuilt and refinished, and I believe they had to rebuild some stairs. A special crew had to be hired to build the set and they have been working evenings," Parker said. The crew had less than two weeks to do the work.

Unofficial estimates of the cost to rebuild the set range from $3,000 to $5,000, but involved departments have not decided who will bear the cost of the reconstruction.

"Someone has to accept liability and pay for rebuilding the set," said Walker. "I don't know if it was burned, but I speculate that's what happened."

"I don't know the facts on it," said James Dain, manager of Building Maintenance. "I told Lee (Walker) when he was ready, we'd get together and have a meeting and decide what happened."

"I would assume no one in an administrative position will blame anyone for it," stated Dallas Burnett, associate dean of the College of Fine Arts and Communications. "We'll take care of it in house."

October's Homecoming bonfire crackled for spectators while allegedly cremating the 'scene' for BYU's theatre department.

Author says fiction is truth embodied

LAURI HOFMANN
Universe Staff Writer

Although fiction is basically lies, there is a way in which it can be believed, said award-winning author Orson Scott Card Friday.

Scott Card, a BYU graduate, spoke in conjunction with the science fiction symposium, "Life, the Universe, and Everything." The lies of fiction are just one way of clarifying truth, he said. Because an author includes the seem of causes behind what the characters do, there must be some truth in the story, he explained. Characters have to behave in an acceptable way. You can't make fiction as strange as the truth.

Scott Card said, for example, you can argue that the story "Moby Dick" is a lie, but you can't argue with the author's structure behind the characters.

He said if the causal connections in a story feel fundamentally wrong to the audience, the audience will feel uncomfortable with the story.

"Eventually, if an author consistently offends you on this level, you will hate him, and he will make you angry," he said.

Scott Card said he believes the deepest part of the human subconscious cannot distinguish between real and unreal memories, so the memories someone obtains from a fiction story can be as persuasive as real events.

Scott Card is a BYU graduate in play writing with a master's degree in English from the University of Utah.

His novel, "Ender's Game," recently won the Hugo and the Nebula awards, the top two honors in science fiction.

He worked for several years as an author for the "Ensign" magazine and has published a novel for members of The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints called "Woman of Destiny," which received the Association for Mormon Letters award for best novel of the year.

Scott Card also spoke on what he believes are the three most important elements in literary art: effectiveness, fundamental truth and aesthetic quality.

"Clarity is fundamental to effectiveness," he said. "The world is elitist. It thinks if anyone understands you, you can't be good."

"The world of perceived literary criticism is dead," said Scott Card. Authors who continue to follow the style of good fiction written in the early 1900s are "literary suicides," he said.

Change helps science fiction writers

LAURI HOFMANN

The world is always changing and technology change makes room for new science fiction, said author Jack Williamson Thursday in conjunction with BYU's science fiction symposium, "Life, the Universe and Everything." Williamson outlined the history of science fiction and said it started as a result of the "avalanche of technological change."

In the previous century, everything was pretty much agreed upon and settled," said Williamson. "There was a very slow increment of change."

When science started progressing rapidly, it inspired science fiction writing because there was a greater awareness of the difference between a real and a supernatural world, he said.

"I think science fiction is about things that are not possible now, but could be sometime, somehow," he said.

Williamson has been writing best-selling science fiction for 60 years and published his first work at age 20.

Williamson said there are two kinds of science fiction authors — the optimists who have a utopian view of society, and the pessimistic writers who live in the past and do not look to the future.

One of the greatest changes that affected science fiction was the explosion of the A-bomb in Japan, said Williamson. "For the first few years after 1945 it was getting harder and harder to be an optimist."

Williamson called the period after the war "the gloomy afternoon of this golden age of science fiction."

"I think we have a moral obligation to be optimists," he said.

Williamson said he got interested in science fiction at a very young age and was able to witness the great technological changes in this century.

"The wonders I lived through were not just in science fiction, they were in real life."

When science fiction began, stories appeared in magazines with titles such as "Amazing Stories," "Startling Stories" and "Astounding Stories," he said.

"In the early years, the magazines were devoted to the sense of wonder. I think science fiction has almost lost that sense of wonder."

The technological changes that are to come, however, will afford an unlimited opportunity for new science fiction, he said.

Fantasy makes sense,' says author

LAURI HOFMANN
Universe Staff Writer

The truth about being human resides in the conflict between reason, emotion and dreams, said author John R. Donaldson Saturday.

Donaldson spoke in conjunction with the science fiction symposium, "Life, the Universe, and Everything." He is the author of the popular six-volume "Chronicles of the Covenants of the Unbeliever."

Donaldson reiterated the views of author Ralph Waldo Emerson and scientist and author Carl Sagan on the composition of the brain. Donaldson believes the brain is composed of several different layers — the surface layers affecting individuality, and the dreaming mind in the deepest layer.

It is in the conflict of those layers that we define ourselves," he said. "What it means to be human lies in the tension between reason, emotion and dreams."

The dreaming mind is in common," he said, "The deeper I reach into the under layers of myself, the more I can reach into you."

Donaldson said science fiction writing is one of the best ways to reach others because as the author reaches into the deepest layer of his brain (the dreaming mind), he is able to reach something in common with others.

"All the most enduring literature is fantasy," said Donaldson. He gave examples of some of the oldest-known fiction — The Iliad and The Odyssey, which deal with fantasy.

"We need the literary resources of fantasy in order to talk about who we are as human beings."

Donaldson told of some stressful experiences in his own life and said, "I've tried the real world, and fantasy makes a lot more sense."

"There is something important and powerful in fantasy that needs to be recognized and articulated," he said, explaining that the intellectual community believes science fiction and fantasy are immature forms of literature.

"I want to provide the terms, or the framework, for you to go out and write science fiction and fantasy and be able to face the prejudices," he told the audience.

Fourteen-year-old actress is currently in her fourth major BYU theater show

By KELLENE RICKS
Universe Staff Writer

"The Wild Duck" is Christi Nelson's fourth BYU production — and she's only 14 years old.

Christi, who has a major part in the show, is the oldest daughter of Robert and Charlotte Nelson.

She remembers her first desires to perform: "We went to Playmill the summer I was seven and I saw another little girl get up there and do a dance. I wanted to, too."

That year, "Letter From a Prophet" was performed here at BYU and the part of a young girl was open for auditions. Her father, who is a faculty member of BYU's theater department, told her about the auditions.

"She had to audition. We took her in and left her there so she was on her own," said her father. "I made it clear to the director that I didn't want him to feel any kind of obligation."

Christi was chosen for the role by the director, Charles Metten, who is also directing her in "The Wild Duck."

"She's a natural," said Metten. "She's not temperamental, she's always on time and learns her lines well."

In "The Wild Duck," Christi has to play some heavy emotional scenes, said Metten. Besides crying onstage, she also has to deal with death.

"When I first read the script, it was scary to think of dying," said Christi. Hedvig, the character Christi plays, is a very realistic role for her.

"It's harder to play someone who could be real. But I like to imagine things. This is a good part to imagine."

"She does well," Metten said. "I'm very happy I went with a real 14 year-old girl rather than casting a tiny adult. Christi has that fresh shyness that's real."

Auditioning for a college production could be a challenging experience, but not so for Christi. "I wasn't scared of much when I was eight," she said. "I remember it was pretty fun."

After "Letter," Christi went on and performed in "Annie Get Your Gun," "Tom Brown's School Days" and "Annie" here at BYU. She has also performed in two productions at Sundance.

Because Sundance pays its actors, Christi is richer than most 14 year-old girls, said her father. "I'm making her save most of it," he said. She did buy a doll, though, and she's planning on using the rest for a mission and college.

However, Christi doesn't know what she wants to study when she goes to college. "I like to write, and act, and I really like my English class. I'm OK in math and science, too. There's a lot of exciting things to do in those areas."

Even at 14, Christi is involved in a lot of things. An eighth-grader at Canyon View Junior High in Orem, she is a member of the singing group, Celebrations.

Christi also recently had the highest score in her math class on a pre-test to qualify for a state-wide competition.

She has played the piano for almost six years, has written poems and short stories, and she even likes to play dolls with her younger sisters and brother, her father said.

"She's a little strung out now. She comes home at 11:30 p.m. from "Duck" rehearsals and has to get to school at 7 a.m. for rehearsals for Celebrations," said her dad.

However, out of the four Nelson children, Christi has always been able to get along with the least amount of sleep. "She didn't sleep once through the night until she was 11 months old," Nelson said.

"She's amazing," said Metten. "I'd work with her any day."

"I'm prejudiced," said her dad. "But I think she's a wonderful little person."

Christi Nelson and Mark Deakins play major roles in Henrik Ibsen's classic drama, "The Wild Duck," which will come to the Pardoe Theater, HFAC, for 14 performances beginning Feb. 12 at 7:30 p.m.

Realism is theme of 'Duck'

By KELLENE RICKS
Universe Staff Writer

Honesty and idealism are the themes of Norwegian playwright, Henrik Ibsen's, "The Wild Duck," opening this week on BYU's Pardoe stage, HFAC.

"There are ways to tell the truth and ways not to tell the truth," said Dr. Charles Metten, director of the production. Ibsen's play illustrates that statement.

No one has any right to go into a family and destroy them by telling them the truth, said Metten. "The Wild Duck" examines what happens when an outsider comes into the family and tries to straighten them out.

Another major question of the play is can a man or woman live without dreams," he continued.

"People need illusions to hold on to," said Janet Van De Graaf, a senior from Illinois who plays one of the three female roles in the 22 member cast. "If you take people's illusions away, they have nothing left."

Metten, a BYU faculty member for 25 years, has wanted to do "The Wild Duck" ever since he read it while going to school at UCLA. Ibsen is, in Metten's opinion, the father of modern realism in the theater.

In Ibsen's plays, the audience sees "real people in a real life situation and through their behavior and actions, we learn about real life," Metten said.

"The Wild Duck" tells the story of "a man with misguided motives who tries to make up for the abuses he has suffered in his own life by working to make his friend's life and marriage ideal," said Metten. "But instead of joy he brings tragedy."

"The play is loaded," said Mark Deakins. Deakins is a senior in comparative literature who plays Gregers Werle, one of the major roles.

"The play made me examine why I do what I do," Deakins said. According to him, "none of the characters are a loss. They're fundamentally good people."

"A lot of people think Ibsen is all dark, but there is humor," said Metten. "There is some comedy, wonderful drama, and some tragedy - just like real life."

Some, upon reading the script, may think the two and a half hour production will be long, said Metten. Not so. "Ibsen isn't meant to be read. He comes alive on the stage."

The production has been in rehearsal since early November. "It's been an easy schedule," said Coleen John, a theater arts major from Salt Lake. According to her, the actors have had time to develop their characters without a lot of pressure.

Metten is especially excited to have Roger Nelson, Springville High School's drama coach, and Christi Nelson, 14 year-old daughter of faculty member, Robert Nelson, appearing in the play.

In addition to those already mentioned, Stephen Pullen and Reese Purser will be appearing in major roles.

Today at 4 p.m. there will be a special "Show and Tell" presentation. Janet Swenson, costume designer, and Karl Pope, set designer, will discuss the different aspects of the show they have been involved in.

In addition, Metten will talk about his concept of the production and will present a scene from the play.

"Show and Tell" will be held in the Pardoe Theatre in the Harris Fine Arts Center and will be open to everyone. There will be no admission charged.

"The Wild Duck" opens Thursday and runs through the rest of this week. It can be seen Feb. 17-21 and 24-28 at 7:30 p.m. A matinee performance will be held Feb. 23 at 4 p.m.

BYU Chamber Soloists to perform this week

By VALERIE PUSEY
Universe Staff Writer

Concertmaster of the Utah Symphony, Ralph Matson, will be featured with the BYU Chamber Soloists this week.

Performances are scheduled Feb. 11 in the Madsen Recital Hall, HFAC, and Feb. 13 at the Temple Square Assembly Hall in Salt Lake City. Both have no admission charge and begin at 7:30 p.m.

The concert will have a two-fold theme.

"The History of a Soldier" by Igor Stravinsky, will be the theme of the first half of the program.

RALPH MATSON

The piece depicts, in word and music, the story of a soldier returning home from war and the "experiences of good and evil he is forced to face," said Clyn D. Barrus, director of the orchestra.

The story, narrated by Keith Rowley, is set to music and features two faculty performers, Percy Kalt, violin and Ronald Brough, percussion. The piece also calls for a clarinet, coronet, trombone and string bass, which will be played by students.

Stravinsky's music is not pretty but is quite dissonant — though it is charming at times, according to Kalt.

"It uses an extreme economy of means," said Kalt of the neo-classical work. The four-note figure is mathematically exploited by Stravinsky and ties the fingers.

The second portion of the concert will feature Matson with the 46 member Chamber Soloists performing Beethoven's Violin Concerto.

"It is deemed the most precious of all concertos," said Barrus. This concerto portrays "lyricism, serenity, and beauty at its most refined level."

The concert was produced during middle years of composition, and a contrast to most of his works which deal with more dramatic elements according to Barrus.

Matson, 38, has performed for over a decade with several of the country's major orchestras, including playing for the Minnesota Orchestra for eight seasons. At present, he is in his second season with the Utah Symphony.

The BYU Chamber Soloists consist of primarily the most advanced members of the Philharmonic.

Today is last day to get tickets for Valentine's Day event

Salt Lake to host first Vienna Ball

The BYU Ballroom Dance Company will provide the entertainment at the first Vienna Ball on Valentine's Day in the Rotunda of the State Capitol in Salt Lake City on Saturday at 8 p.m. Today is the last day to buy tickets.

By MICHAEL JENSEN
Universe Staff Writer

Today is the last day to purchase tickets for the first Vienna Ball on Valentine's Day.

David Dalton, conductor of the Salt Lake Symphony and professor at BYU, will provide music for the event with the BYU Ballroom Dance Company providing the entertainment.

Appropriate dress is formal and semi-formal. No tickets will be sold at the door and tickets must be purchased today by calling 375-1406.

The Vienna Ball will be held in the Rotunda of the State Capitol in Salt Lake City beginning at 8 p.m. with the Grand March and Grand Waltz.

The evening will begin with the introduction of dignitaries. Royalties from high schools and colleges in the area will also be introduced with the music, "Beautiful Blue Danube" playing in the background said Dalton.

"This should be an event in Utah in the tradition of the balls held during the winter season in Vienna," said Dalton.

"Ever since I experienced the Opera Ball at the Vienna State Opera House during my student days, I have had a latent desire to try and re-enact something similar."

The experience in Vienna was an elegant affair and unforgettable, Dalton said.

"Based on the large audiences who hear our springtime concert, 'Evening in Vienna,' — 5,000 this past May in the Tabernacle," he said, "I am confident that people will respond to the idea of a Vienna Ball."

Where "Evening in Vienna" will consist of just music, the Vienna Ball will include dancing to music provided by a full symphony orchestra.

Not all the music will be waltz, according to Dalton. Music from Johann Strauss, Henry Mancini, Barry Manilow, the Beatles and others will be played. During the evening there will also be a gourmet buffet.

The BYU Ballroom Dance Company are the undefeated U.S. National Formation Champions and the first Americans ever to win the British Formation Championships — something they have done three times.

The hosts for the ball are Douglas and Coleen Bischoff with Dan Marriott as grand chairman.

Who would honestly believe that a starting player in high school would become a college scholarship athlete and is now on his way to be a viable candidate for the U.S. National Volleyball team? Not many. But then there are others who know better or know Lane Peterson and should know that there is no limit as to what he can do if given opportunity. According to Peterson, BYU has that opportunity that has allowed the senior middle blocker on the BYU men's volleyball team to extend where he is today. BYU volleyball Coach Tom Peterson sums it up, "You get with other players and your talents excel and that is how it's been for me." Since joining the BYU team in 1985, Peterson has been recognized one of the best middle blockers in the country and has also maintained a .900 hitting efficiency average this season — the highest on the team. Growing up in Newport Beach, Calif., Peterson was brought up in a family of athletes and introduced to sports at a young age. Older brother, who played volleyball for Harvard, taught Peterson and his identical twin brother, Robert the basics of sport. At Newport Harbor High, Peterson was cut from the volleyball team as a sophomore, played his junior year on the JV team and his senior year on the varsity team although, he never started. Robert Peterson being invited by recruiters asked them to take a look at his brother Lane and it was this that landed him a full-ride scholarship to Long Beach State. Peterson played one year at Long Beach and then transferred to Orange State Junior College where he set volleyball aside and rowed crew for a year. Peterson found out later that crew taught him good concentration skills and to work hard which has been an asset for volleyball. Peterson took two years off for a mission to Australia which he credits much of his mental and physical maturity. To Peterson it's an advantage to athletes, "For example, me, an athlete with the eligibility of a 21-year-old in the body of a 24-year-old." Wanting a change of scenery Peterson enrolled at the University of Utah. With volleyball not heavily pursued there, Peterson helped to take volleyball to new heights in popularity at the school. BYU Coaches Tom Peterson and Carl McGown approached him and asked if he'd like to play for BYU. Peterson's first response was, "I doubt it." But despite adding on another year to graduate Peterson found it to be a good move. He did want to play volleyball and BYU had the common denominator — the church. According to Peterson much of the team's success has been because of the team itself and the coaching. "We are a cohesive close team. We rejoice in the success of our other teammates. And it's our inner desire to win that is outwardly expressed by our intensity on the court." "We feed off the crowds which makes us feel like performers. I thank the outstanding student body for their support. They make us feel prestigious to be a member of the volleyball team," added Peterson. Carrying 19 credit hours along with playing on the team should be proof enough that Peterson has no limit to his abilities. After graduating this April in International Relations Peterson will try out for the World University Games in Yugoslavia. Peterson would also like to try coaching, "I don't ever want to put it (volleyball) away," he commented.

BYU's middle blocker Lane Peterson spikes the ball through the outreached hands of two Long Beach State defenders.

Jason Buck and Phil Simms honored in musical tribute

Jason Buck, BYU's Outland Trophy winner, and Phil Simms, quarterback for the Superbowl champion New York Giants, have something in common: both have received a copy of an original winning song, "A Hero," written by a California songwriter. George Byer, 74, from Hemet, Idaho, said he wrote "A Hero" three years ago for all those people "who come up the hard way." Byer said that Buck deserves "A Hero" because he had to struggle to where he is now. According to Byer, he read in a local paper about Buck being turned down as a football player several years ago because he was not big enough. Byer said he wrote "A Hero" hoping that the song would inspire people to be heroes within themselves." According to Byer, his song "is the same caliber as 'The Impossible Dream' and 'I Did It My Way.'" Buck, after receiving a copy of "A Hero," said that he was flattered that someone would dedicate a song to him. Although Buck has not heard the song yet, his wife, Roxi, indicated that the song will be played at "Jason Buck Day" in Idaho this May. Byer, aside from being a song writer, is the founder and director of National Friendship Week. He has also been honored with awards such as the Freedom Foundation of Valley Forge Award and Byer has been considered for the President's Medal of Freedom Award. Byer said that in his life he has had to endure a lot of things. "I have always considered myself an underdog, and I like to take the underdog and give him a push. If I can help someone — that's my mission."

WAC teams prepare for finale

With BYU's first home loss in the Western Athletic Conference competition, the race to the top of the division has intensified. Wyoming, 8-2 and idle last week, finds itself on top with BYU, 9-3, and UTEP, 8-3, close behind. The race among the conference leaders in New Mexico must battle to retain that position after suffering its third consecutive loss Saturday to Idaho, 77-65. Despite a last minute Lobo rally, the Utes were able to hold on to the victory behind the 17-point performance from center Mitch Smith. With a win, Utah stands at 6-6 in WAC competition. The Lobos drop to 6-5. In other WAC action Saturday, Hawaii recorded its second conference win by surprising Colorado State 72-58. The Rainbow's John Priel and Alan Andrus combined for 19 and 17 points, respectively, to lead Hawaii to a home victory. Although San Diego State's freshman guard Tony Ross tallied a career best of 33 points, it wasn't enough to give the Aztecs its first WAC win. Air Force defeated SDSU 81-77. With the victory Air Force improved its record to 5-5 while SDSU sank to 0-10. After this Saturday's game against Utah, BYU will end the season on the road. The Cougars must visit SDSU, Hawaii and Wyoming. Conference-leading Wyoming must still travel to UTEP and New Mexico before the WAC Tournament on March 5-7.

Gymnasts tumble past AFA

By VALERIE REYES
Universe Sports Writer

Over the weekend, the BYU men's gymnastics team defeated the Air Force Academy in a dual match on the Falcons' home territory. The Cougars' nine-man effort scored a total of 263.30 points to give them an easy win over the Falcons' 244.85 points. The Cougar victory was led by junior gymnast John Dohner. Dohner, who is expected to be one of the Cougars' key gymnasts this season, tied for first place in three of the five events. On the pommel horse, Dohner tied with teammate Robert Allen scoring an 8.65. Allen, along with Dohner should be a strong team leader in this event for the season. Dohner's performance on the floor exercise gave him a 9.0 to tie with teammate Roger Merritt for first place. Dohner also tied with Air Forces' Markus Kaneshiro on the vault with a score of 9.0. BYU Coach Wayne Young felt that the Cougars were truly prepared for this meet and that the previous meets were only a "practice" for the gymnasts. "The team looked the best so far this season," said Young about the team's performance. On Feb. 21, to open their home season the Cougars will host the defending national champion, Arizona State, in the Smith Fieldhouse at 7 p.m.

Cougar divers make big splash in weekend competition

Members of the BYU men's and women's diving teams won several events over the weekend while hosting Air Force and Colorado State on Friday and Wyoming on Saturday.

On Friday, Chris Wilson of BYU ran away with first place in the 1-meter event with a score of 235.05 and teammate Debbie Stubbs won the 3-meter competition with a score of 239.25.

Against Wyoming, Wilson and Stubbs switched first place finishes from the previous day. This time Stubbs won the 1-meter event and Wilson won the 3-meter competition.

"Everyone of our women divers are competitively equal and they should all have a chance to win the HCAC championship," Diving Coach Stan Curnow said.

The men's diving team is led by Terry Griffith, who won the 3-meter diving event against Wyoming with a score of 293.02.

Father and son suffer similar fate

CHICAGO (AP) — An 18-year-old man died of a possible heart attack while playing basketball on the same playground court where a heart attack killed his father a decade earlier, a relative said.

Rodney Harris was pronounced dead at 4:36 p.m. Friday in Bernard Mitchell Hospital, said Anne Duggan of the University of Chicago Hospitals.

"His diagnosis was head injury and possible cardiac arrest," said Ms. Duggan. She said Harris apparently injured his head in a fall after he was stricken.

Harris' aunt, Tina Harris, said Saturday night that Harris and his father, Willie "Sonny" Harris, "died practically identically the same, on the same playground."

Personal space analyzed

Barriers are up in elevators

By KRISTIN BECKSTEAD
Universe Staff Writer

Have you ever wondered why people who are in elevators usually look at the floor indicator, don't make eye contact, talk or touch other people? According to a BYU psychology professor, it is because riding in an elevator is an invasion of people's personal space.

"Personal space is an invisible bubble that establishes a boundary around a person that they don't like others to penetrate," said Dr. Darhl M. Pedersen, professor of psychology. "When their personal space is violated, a person feels that they are being taken advantage of. So, when a stranger violates our boundary of personal space it makes us feel uncomfortable."

Most situations in our culture allow us to keep our personal space. There is usually enough room, but there are situations where it is not convenient to enable everyone to have enough room — like in elevators, said Pedersen.

"When I ride in an elevator, I really want to get off as soon as possible because I feel uncomfortable," said Tracy Gilbert, from Thousand Oaks, Calif., majoring in sociology. "I feel like people are invading my space when they stand too close to me. When they talk to me I just wonder why they are talking to me."

"We learn in our culture the appropriate ways to manage crowding when personal space is violated," said Pedersen. "The strategies are of two types: The first is minimizing other intimacy variables, for example by reducing eye contact, smiling and indirect body orientation. The second is the use of environmental props, such as placing a coat or a newspaper between us and others."

"You notice on elevators people won't look at you in the eye, they look away, they don't smile or talk," said Pedersen. "They will look at the floor indicator rather than each other. Talking is also minimized because it attracts attention."

"People may need a newspaper to divert their attention from others," he said.

When people enter elevators they distribute themselves to minimize personal contact, said Pedersen.

"People distribute themselves to minimize interpersonal distances. As more and more people enter the elevator, they continue that consensual adjustment," said Pedersen. "It's only when a person violates those norms that discomfort is aroused."

The norms differ from culture to culture. The North American culture dictates that our personal space is reserved for people we know intimately making a non-contact culture. Whereas Latin Americans, Italians and the French are contact cultures.

CPR procedures revised for safety

By MARTA NEILSON
Universe Staff Writer

The CPR protocol has been updated. People who are presently certified in performing Cardiopulmonary Resuscitation (CPR) may have to relearn their ABCs.

The American Heart Association, who standardized the airway, breathing and circulation (ABC) techniques of CPR, has recently updated CPR protocol.

The new protocol involves changes in establishing an airway and also in administering ventilation, chest compressions and back blows.

According to Patty Ravert, a registered nurse and CPR instructor/trainer at Utah Valley Regional Medical Center, the new procedures for maintaining the ABCs are better able to aid in saving the lives of heart attack victims.

"You have to have knowledge that it could be a heart attack, and then you have to know what to do," Ravert said.

The initial step in resuscitating a person having a heart attack is establishing an airway.

New CPR procedures recommend using the head tilt-chin lift method for opening an airway, rather than the old method of head tilt-neck lift. "The new procedure may not cause as much trauma," Ravert said.

Instead of four quick breaths, new guidelines advise giving two longer breaths to a person before chest compressions begin.

During chest compressions, two additional breaths are given after every 15 compressions. According to Ravert, this change was made to avoid confusion for the person giving CPR.

"This makes CPR easier to teach, and the two longer sustained (breaths) are more effective," Ravert said.

Under new protocol, both one- and two-man CPR deliver 80-100 chest compressions per minute, instead of 60-80 per minute.

"I would think it would be better for blood flow," said Ravert.

If a person's airway is obstructed, the abdominal thrust (Heimlich maneuver) is the preferred method for removing the obstruction in an adult or child.

Back blows are no longer advised except on an infant whose internal organs could be damaged by abdominal thrusts, said Ravert.
